The Pulpit

A SERMON BY THE REV. IRA W. HENDERSON

Subject: Murder.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the above theme, the pastor, Rev. Ira Wemmell Henderson, took as his text: Exodus 20:13, "Thou shalt not kill." He said:

The extent and force of the admonition to recognize the inalienable right of all men to life is not widely recognized in our day, in view of the professed love of our forefathers and us for God and the Christ. With no circumlocution and no wavering of the voice, Moses speaks out for God a principle that the modern world, as the nations of all ages have done, disregards. To be sure the civilization of to-day is better in general than the manner of life thousands of years ago. We do not kill our neighbors out in the open to gain our food. The settlement of private wrongs by "lawful justice" is, in this country at least, limited largely to the mountain whites. No man of enlightened conscience asks the right of a ruler anywhere to stamp out a human life arbitrarily as of old. Physical disability in a babe to-day merits more our sympathy than slaughter. Gradually we are coming to recognize the rights and privileges of the children who are yet unborn. Vendettas are unpopular, and the mere threat to kill is, very properly, sufficient to put a man under bonds to keep the peace. Nowhere is the murderer safe from the clutches of outraged law. Does he slay his victim, then here, then whither shall he flee? In Mohammedan Turkey will hound him to the death to return him to the scene of his fortal sin in the borders of Christian Armenia. Here and there a few far-seeing souls declare that even the State has no business to exact an eye for an eye, a life for a life, and they say that society has no more right to cut short a human career than has that unit of society the individual. Yes, the recognition by the world of the wisdom of this commandment is greater to-day than ever before, but it is not yet what it should be.

To kill a man is to deprive him of life. But the process may be varied and the length of time consumed in sifting the light of life may be greater or less, according to the means employed. "Thou shalt not kill," says the commandment, and instinctively we picture the quarrel, the fight, the hand drawn to the dirk, "Thou shalt not kill," and we see the gun, the axe, the poison, the bludgeon. "Thou shalt not kill," and the vision of a sharp, keen conflict, man to man, or of the silent, sudden blow, flashes into the mind's view. Yes, each photograph is true to some scene in life. To these the law refers! But is this all? Is it always the axe or the poison or the gun that fells a soul into eternity? Must the murderer be the man with the instrument of immediate death? Are the murders which are the result of overt crime the only killings that take place? I think not. Slow work is not so fast, but it is just as sure. The breaking of a human heart is a murder. Sometimes the death of a child and hasten death are criminals in the sight of God, though the law may never touch them. Far be it from me to say that many of the men who commit these indirect murders have any real intention to cause misery or to commit crime. But the truth is that they are none the less culpable. The one thing that is needed is a clear-cut vision of the meaning of the commandment which frames our text. The need is for sharp and unmistakable definition of what it is to kill. The eyes of men must be opened to their personal responsibility for the outcome of their acts. A realization of the fullness of the command of Christ must thrill every human heart. Moral laziness must give the way to moral clarity of vision. Spiritual indifference must yield the road to spiritual insight. The Christ must come into all men's hearts, not in small measure, but with a fullness that shall leave no room for unrighteousness. We must train our minds to thoughtfulness for others, and not to satisfaction of self. The money in our purses ought to burn our very souls if we see upon it any tinge of blood. The health and happiness of the man who toils, and bends a weary back that we may live in luxury, must be our care. The amelioration and betterment of the life of all the world should be our constant aim. As Christian individuals we should guard the life of every human soul.

As the right of the individual to say his brother is denied by the commandment, so also implicitly the right of society to take human life is questioned. The murderer is an enemy to society, and for the best keep him under guard. But the principle of the lex talionis, the life exacted for the life destroyed, is unChristian, and in the light of the teachings of Jesus is unwarranted. The State lowers itself and commits real sin when it wreaks the penalty of death upon the modern Cain. Vengeance is the business of the Lord. If indeed there be any such thing. The State has nothing to gain by the sending of any soul to his last rest. The original basis of the death to a man not of the State's making. The principle of capital punishment is as vicious at bottom as is private murder by the individual, and is unwholesome in that it discards the very law of inalienable right to life that it essays to protect. "Thou shalt not kill," says the State, "for if you do, and we can prove the case against you, we will slay you." The inconsistency of the situation should appeal to everyone, but queerly enough the very disciples of the Christ who said, "Father, forgive," are among the loudest clamorers for the life of the murderer.

But the greatest example of the violation of this commandment is to be found in the actions of the Christian nations of to-day. Theoretically Christian, we are, as segregated peoples, largely pagan. Praising God as individuals and despising, most of us, the principles of Christ, we conduct and un-Christlike acts, we stand ready as members of a great social body to support and to enact measures that are wholly corrupt and corrupting. Professing a love for peacefulness and for the Prince of Peace, we pay without a murmur our military tithes. Indeed, we may often be the spectacle of men and peoples, each paying homage to the same God, attacking each at the other's throat, the meanwhile each is asking God to give the victory. And all too often we may see the armies and the navies of a wealthy Christian nation fall upon the armies of a weaker sister to collect a money debt. The murder, we say, is justified by the decision by fisticuffs which all recognize shall end in the exact amount of the bill rendered. How ludicrous were it not so lamentable.

Another thing that is noticeable is that Joseph was not unduly puffed up by the unexpected and unprecedented influence that was so suddenly thrust into his grasp. It might easily have turned his head. But the stupendous dreamy youth of yesterday is now a man. He has seen much of the world and he is cautious. Called to a special work he keeps to his own work. He offends not by any exhibition of pride of position. He uses his immense authority for the future welfare of the people. In the days of prosperity he prepares for the coming days of adversity. He shepherds, as God would have him to do, the people under his rule.

The lesson ought to teach us that nothing is impossible to the man who loves more God. It should make us humble, regardless of the station to which we may gradually or suddenly attain.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MAY 5 BY THE REV. I. W. HENDERSON.

Subject: Joseph the Wise Ruler in Egypt. Gen. 41:38-49—Golden Text, James 1:5 — Memory Verses, 38-40.

Two years have passed, as we are told in Gen. 41:1, between the events recorded in the chronicle in the Scripture that we studied last week and those that are recorded in our lesson for to-day. With Joseph they have been years of confinement in an Egyptian prison. To be sure, he was a man of importance above the men who were jailed with him, he was a favorite and trusted lieutenant of the warders of the dungeons; but he was nevertheless a prisoner. A good life in a prison is still a prison life. Joseph was a prisoner under the dominion of Pharaoh. He was also a prisoner for God. He could unite to-day with Paul in the declaration, "I am in bonds in chains for God." Joseph's only crime had been his desire to please God and he was faithful to the social obligations of his surroundings and his manhood. He went to prison because he would rather be obedient to the vision and the call of God than to barter his character and the favor of the Pharaoh. He was also a prisoner for the enlightenment of his fellow men. They were pay who suffered from the decision by fisticuffs which all recognize shall end in the exact amount of the bill rendered. How ludicrous were it not so lamentable.

Another thing that is noticeable is that Joseph was not unduly puffed up by the unexpected and unprecedented influence that was so suddenly thrust into his grasp. It might easily have turned his head. But the stupendous dreamy youth of yesterday is now a man. He has seen much of the world and he is cautious. Called to a special work he keeps to his own work. Piedmont-Bedford Concentrated Iron and Alum Water

Contains such a remarkable combination of natural remedies that it has made a reputation for itself by curing Chronic Diseases after many other treatments had failed.

Its equal cannot be found in the treatment of Indigestion, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Female Complaints, Malaria, Nervousness, Stomach and Bowel Disorders, Piles, Inactive Liver, Scrofula, and other Blood and Skin Diseases.

We do not claim that one bottle of this Water will cure a disease of long standing, as this would be impossible, but we have such confidence in what will be the result if used a reasonable length of time, that we sell it with a guarantee.

This Water is simply a natural treatment for Chronic Diseases, and is by no means a patent medicine. By its use you can be cured in your own home at the cost of 3c. per day even better than if you lost several months time and spent several hundred dollars in going to the Springs.

It is not necessary for us to go to California to get testimonials. We have them from people you know, and want you to read every one given below.

TESTIMONIALS.

My wife suffered for twenty years with falling of an ulcerated womb, and was bed-ridden for five years; was treated by different physicians with only temporary benefit. Twelve months' use of P-B. Concentrated Iron and Alum Water made a perfect cure. She gained thirty pounds in flesh. I regard it as the most valuable remedy known for female and other troubles.

Gus. J. Burford,
Natalia, Va.

About 22 years ago I contracted blood poison, and it clung to me through all those years, until I used P-B. Concentrated Iron and Alum Water. I am now in perfect health, and have gained 25 pounds in weight. I also suffered from Bleeding Piles, and obtained no permanent relief until I used this remedy. I must be permanently cured now, as I have had no need to use the water for the past two years.

Robert Nunnally,
Amherst, Va.

I have lived in the neighborhood of the P-B. Iron and Alum Springs for a number of years, and can testify to the merits of the water as a tonic, and a sure cure for Scrofula and other Blood Troubles I have also heard it highly recommended for female troubles, and my father used it for throat trouble with great benefit.

Mrs. Sallie J. Nance,
East Radford, Va.

I am glad to inform you that the Concentrated Water put up by your Company has been of great value to my daughter. She was in a very weak and nervous condition before using the water, and two bottles made her almost a new woman. I am satisfied that it is a valuable remedy and should be met with a large sale.

Joel H. Cutchin, Mayor,
Roanoke, Va.

I suffered from Indigestion to such an extent that it was for weeks that I could not eat anything but the lightest of diet, could not even eat bread. Dr. Coke prescribed your Concentrated Iron and Alum Water, which I have used for several months, and the result is that I can eat almost anything, and my Indigestion is cured.

Mrs. J. F. Hinton,
621 Oxford St., Danville, Va.

My son, who was suffering with Indigestion to such an extent that he had no appetite, and his system was muddy, used one 15-oz. bottle of your Concentrated Water. It gives me pleasure to state that it has had the effect to clear up his stomach, and give him a good appetite and cure his indigestion. I consider it a most valuable water.

Harry Wooding, Mayor,
Danville, Va.

After taking your Concentrated Iron and Alum Water myself, and using it in my family with fine results, I do not hesitate to recommend it as one of the best medicines to be found. We use it as a tonic, for dyspepsia and Liver Trouble, and regard it as invaluable.

J. J. Lawson,
Cash'r Bank of South Boston,
South Boston, Va.

I have recently used your Concentrated Water in several cases with very satisfactory results, and believe it taking it at present for a form of indigestion, and is pleased with it indeed. She says that she can feel the soothing effect upon the stomach in a short while after taking a dose.

J. M. Shackleford, M. D.,
Martinsville, Va.

After using an 18-oz. bottle of your P-B. Concentrated Iron and Alum Water, I feel that I cannot speak too highly in praise of it. After using it a few days, I could eat my breakfast with a relish, which I had not done for months before. While my general health has been uniformly good, I have suffered considerably from intermittent attacks of Rheumatism, especially in the fall and winter seasons, but have not had a pain since using your preparation. Rheumatism is an inveterated the recurrence of the disease. It is my opinion not only a good tonic, but a sure blood purifier as well.

John T. Loving, Mayor,
Pulaski, Va.

For more than five years I have been troubled with Chronic Dyspepsia and Stomach trouble, and had but one bottle of this valuable Water and actually believe that I am permanently cured. It has done me a world of good and what it has accomplished for me I know it will do for others."

Ready For The Festivities.

A woman, ably assisted by her escort, probably her husband, made her toilet on the car at Bowling Green Station on the other afternoon. They looked as if they had arrived from the south of Europe recently. They got on the car at the Bowling Green Station and seated themselves in a cross-seat. The man's holiday attire was completed by an alpine hat cocked on the side of his head and a hugh pink scarf. The woman was bareheaded, her hair was elaborately dressed and she wore long pendant earrings, enameled gaudily.

Scarcely had the train started when the man took from a valise a blue silk skirt, trimmed with lace. The woman arose, let fall the walking skirt she wore, and put on the other dress, being very careful not to disarrange her hair. Other women in the car looked startled, the men seemed much interested; the lady making her toilet was unopposed as if she were in her boudoir. With deliberateness she smoothed and took off her dress waist, exhibiting arms and neck burned by a Southern sun plainly, and put on a white silk waist which the man took from the valise. He deftly buttoned the waist up the back. Finally seating herself, she drew on a pair of white kid gloves and smoothed her skirt with a graceful sweep of the hand plainly.

Now I am ready for the festivities."

Bit Of His Ear.

Amello Bogart, a motorman, and Rocco Caruso, a bootblack, lived together at 337 West Thirty-ninth Street. On Saturday night Bogart came in after 1 o'clock and fell over a rocking chair. He awakened Caruso, who was angry at being waked up. It was a fight which ended when Caruso bit off Demo's left ear.

The wounded man ran with the severed ear toward the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, but was stopped by John L. Sullivan, one of the precinct sleuths.

"What have you got?" demanded Sullivan.

"Thats' mine," said Demo. "Caruso bita my ear off."

On the way to the station Demo said to Sullivan: "You maka da grande agatsat. da Italiani with guns?"

"Sure," was the reply.

"Then why don't you pulla his teeth?" said Demo, referring to Caruso, who had been captured in the meantime. Caruso was held in $1500 bail for trial on a charge of mayhem.

Nearly 8,000 Immigrants Let In.

Thursday was almost a record day at Ellis Island. Nearly 8,000 immigrants were passed through the portals, including a very large number of Italians, none of whom, according to the inspectors who examined them, had either revolvers or knives, which may be procured here later, even cheaper than in Italy.

A mechanical filtration plant for Grand Rapids, Mich., has been recommended by L. W. Anderson, city engineer. The question of an improved water supply for Grand Rapids has been under consideration for many years, and gave rise several years ago to extensive bribery scandals. Reports on various projects have been made by a number of engineers of standing. The average daily water consumption of the entire city is now some 12,000,000 or 13,000,000 gallons.

An interesting demonstration was given at a recent exhibition of physical instruments in London of the fact that an intimate connection exists between the magnitude of the details visible in a microscope and the color of the light used for illuminating the object. When the short-or light-waves, those toward the blue end of the spectrum, are employed, smaller details can be seen than when the light comes from other region of longer waves, toward the yellow and red end of the spectrum. Microscope manufacturers have taken advantage of this fact by producing an apparatus with which the stage can be illuminated at will by light emanating from any chosen portion of the spectrum.

SHAPING HAT RIMS.

Skill and Experience Required For the Style of Silk Hats.

The nail on his right forefinger was long, yellow, horny and the fingers very bad so thickened and hardened that it seemed to be covered with pale leather.

He was a silk hat maker, and it was from curling hat brims thus his finger had changed so strangely. Describing the process of a silk hat's manufacture, he said:

"The belief that cardboard forms a part of a fashionable silk hat is false. The hat is first built up of various thicknesses of fine, fashionably soft soaked in shellac that, by means of wooden moulds and hot irons weighing from two pounds to three to the dozen, the hat is pressed into one on the other, till a perfect shape, brim and all complete, is obtained.

"The silk is next put on. This silk runs from $15 to $15 a yard. It looks like plush in the piece. The hatmaker cuts it on the bias and moulds it around the hat to the foundation. The strips must be very accurately cut, and great care is needed in their ironing and cementing so as to give a perfect diagonal joint. Look at your silk hat's seam the next time you wear it. The joint's perfection will surprise and amaze you.

"The brim, up to this point, is flat. Now its curling commences. This is where my queer business comes in. The shaping of a hat brim is purely a matter of hand and eye and taste. It is a delicate, fine process, and is highly heated so as to give it pliancy.

"And, of course, working on this hot material, patting and prodding it, the forefinger thickens and the nail gets horny.

"Nevertheless, hat curling is pleasant, artistic work. Hat curlers have reputations the same as artists. Their work is distinctive. An expert can tell it at a glance."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

By-Products of Massachusetts Farms.

New England farmers have found that they can add somewhat to their incomes by the harvesting of their unusual crops. In Western Massachusetts each fall the farmers, who clear their land of brush, supply the local mills with hundreds of tons of witch-hazel branches, from which, in the district about Chester, Mass., 250 barrels of extract were produced last year. The price paid the farmers is from $2 to $3 a ton. Blackbirch brush is gathered for distilling a valuable substitute for oil of wintergreen. For this brush, which the farmers formerly burned in clearing their land, they are now paid $2.50 a ton. Last season 150 tons were used, from which nearly 6000 pounds of oil were obtained. Only experts, it is said, can distinguish this product from the genuine oil of wintergreen, and it is in great demand by druggists and confectioners, the local manufacturers obtaining it for $2 a pound wholesale. It is used in rheumatic medicines and as a flavoring extract for birch beer. Medicinal oil is distilled from sweet fern, which grows in great abundance on the rocky hillsides of Western Massachusetts. Its properties are said to be similar to those of witch-hazel, while its odor is more pleasant.—Leslie's Weekly.

A Case of Spring Catarrh.

Mrs. N. F. Lawler, 4234 N. Broadway, Philadelphia, Kas., writes: "Last spring I caught a severe cold, which developed into a serious case of catarrh. I felt weak and sick, and could neither eat nor sleep well.

"A member of our club who had been cured of catarrh through the use of Peruna advised me to try it, and I did so at once. I expected help, but nothing like the wonderful change for the better I observed almost as soon as I started taking it. In three days I felt much better, and within two weeks I was in fine health. Peruna is a wonderful medicine."

Pe-ru-na Relieves Spring Catarrh.

MISS DORA HAYDEN.

"Without hesitation I write to thank you for the great relief I have found in your valuable medicine, Peruna, and will call the attention of all my friends suffering with catarrh to that fact. I believe I shall ever fully recommend it to all suffering with catarrh in any form."—Miss Dora Hayden, 329 6th St., S. E., Washington, D. C.

Place He Was Fitted For.

The village carpenter had given so generously of his services and sound advice toward rebuilding the little memorial chapel that when it was completed at the summer people agreed that he should be asked to speak after the luncheon which was to follow the dedication exercises.

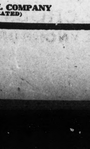
The day and the carpenter's turn came.

Ladies and gentlemen—dear friends," he began, his good, brown face very red, indeed, "I am a good deal better fitted for the scaffold than for public speaking!"

Then he realized what he had said and sat down amid roars of laughter.—Youth's Companion.

"THE MARRYING SQUIRE."

Justice Geo. E. Law, of Brazil, Ind., Has Married 1400 Couples.



Justice Geo. E. Law, of Brazil, Ind., has lately earned title "The Marrying Squire," by which he is known far and wide, having already married some 1400 couples. Ten years ago he was by-jupity County Treasurer. "At that time," said Justice Law, "I was suffering from an annoying kidney trouble. My back ached, my rest was broken at night, and the passages of the kidney secretions were too frequent and contained sediment. Three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1897, and for the past nine years I have been free from kidney complaint and backache."

THE VALUE OF PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE

Personal knowledge is the winning factor in the culminating contests of this competitive age. And when of ample character it places its fortunate possessor in the front ranks of

The Well Informed of the World.

A vast fund of personal knowledge is really essential to the achievement of the highest excellence in any field of human effort.

A Knowledge of Forms, Knowledge of Functions and Knowledge of Products are all of the utmost value and in questions of life and health when a time limit is desired it should be remembered that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., is an ethical product which has met with the approval of the most eminent physicians and gives universal satisfaction, because it is a remedy of Known Quality, Known Excellence and Known Component Parts and has won the valuable patronage of millions of the Well Informed of the world, who know of their component parts and from actual use that is the finest and best of family laxatives, for which no extravagant or unreasonable claims are made.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to worldwide acceptance as the most excellent family laxative. As its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well Informed of the world to be the best we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of—Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects, always, when purchasing be full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, whether you call for Syrup of Figs —or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.
